1860-1861-1868.

In 1930 the Democratic party of the country livided used into two parties. One faction, which afterwards nemanical Breckmidge and ame, demanded the dissolution of the Union which afterwards memorated Breekunidge and tame, demanded the dissolution of the Union veen by force, unless the Southern States, comprising a minority of the whole people, were continued in their anomalous political supremacy and dictatorship. The other faction, led by Douglas, insisted upon the preservation of the Union, and denied the possibility of secession except through rebellion and a civil war. The difference between the two factions was best shown in the speech of Douglas at New York, where, when asked whether the South would not be justified in leaving the Union if Lincoln should be elected, he answered that secession for such cause would be rebellion and treason, for which those engaged in it ought to be hanged. The campangin proceeded, the Douglas Democracy publicly repudiating secasion as treason, and the Breekinnidge faction insisting upon it as a right to be justified period in case a Republican President should be chosen. In November the American propie elected Mr. Lincoln, thousands of Democrata shouldoing Mr. Douglas when they perceived that he had no change of such as the first threat of the production of threat-ned rebellion norce emphatic.

In 1864 the threat of 1800 had been verified; threatened rebelion more emphasic.

In 1964 the threat of 1869 had been verified; the rebelion had taken place, and civil war will delike the rebelion had taken place, and civil war will delike the rebelion had taken place, and civil war will cause them always to command the best price. Like strawbarries, care should always be taken normy of the members, who had cutered the Union army, or whose sympathies were with the Union army, or whose sympathies are to other seen in the market for such army the army the army the market for such army the market for such army to committee them always to command they are already to expose t on amost any terms. The consideration to the box or basket for supment. It pays are saides was resented as deeply by the Coperate of Vermont and Wisconsin as by the fitted of the fitte

A Swindler Punished. The Milwaukee News tells this story :

A Swindler Puntshed.

The Milwaukee News tells this story:

"Yesterday morning, in the municipal court, Mr. Charles E. Robinson was requested to stand up, and was in official terms informed by the judge that he was charged with being an idle person, without visible means of support, and therefore, a vagram, and was requested to plead guilty to that vagation decusation. In the sequel he was found guilty and was cent to the house of correction as a vagram.

"The case is a somewhat unusual one, and is circumstances are worthy of mention. The detendant is a tall, well dressed person, who came to the Newhall House day before yesterday, in the moaning, in company with a beautiful young lady, and registered as Charles E. Robinson and wife. During his stay he secund to be unlimitedly prodigat of his means, and beverages of the most expensive kinds by the bott. le, and carriages by the hour, were apparently matters of every-day occurrence with him, and were ordered without sith. So prodigat was he that his liabilities at the hotel during the day reached nearly $40. In the meanine the capitivaling young lady, who was upon the books as Robinson's wite, had hear charming all listners about the hotel with the superior manner in which also had at intervals during the day been performing upon one of the pisnos in the pariors Early in the evening Robinson was not visible, and at the office was presented to bis null ress an unsealed note, evidently intended to be perused there. Its contents were his feminine hand, and as follows.

"The Call at nine instead of at ten follows:
"Dear Ned: Call at nine instead of at ten "nek. JESSIE."

as follows:

"Hear Ned: Call at nine instead of at ten of cock.

"Hear Ned: Call at nine instead of at ten of cock.

"In the meantime a newspaper containing accounts of Robinson, stating he had been a member of a very wide-spread fraturalty, but had broken his obligations and been discarded by them, and that he was traveling as a swindler to obtain what money he could on the strength of such ties; that he was the son of a wealthy gentern as the strength of such ties; that he was the son of a wealthy gentern as the strength of such ties; that he was the son of a wealthy gentern as the such ties; that he was the son of a wealthy gentern as the strength of similar character, was placed in the hands of the proprietors of the hotsi, and it occurred to the clerk that the little note was simply a ruse to cause delay while the couple should get entirely beyond reach; and on investigation he found in reality that the couple had left. He repaired immediately to the 7 o'clock boat bound for Chicago, and arrested the departing Robinson.

"On his person was found a quantity of bank checks on the First National Bank of Angelies," New York, and other bogus papers. He was taken to the sation, and yesterday after he had been in custody all night, a check for a larger amount then Robinson's bill, payable to himself and agned by himself, on this bank, reached the proprietors of the Newhall, stating that has twas this excuse for leaving without Inquidation, and requesting that the surplus money and his long, gage might be kept until his rearre. His long-proprietors or me seem and some and the his excuse for leaving without Inquidation, and requesting that the surplus mency and his baggage might be kept until his return. His baggage was found to consist of a dirty old carpet hag with nothing in it; and the check was worthless.

This clegant y dressed young man was yesterness that we continued to the Home of Correction for day sentenced to the Roma of Correction for thirty days as a vagrant, and left for that painties institution closely handcuffed to saiding a wretch as was ever visited with a sentence for drunken beach by a round. Most product of a progression dling operations.
